ESF-8 Public Health and Medical Updates

- On July 2, The U.S. Food and Drug Administration (FDA) issued an Emergency Use Authorization for a Flu and COVID-19 multiplex assay. The test detects and differentiates RNA from SARS-CoV-2, influenza A virus, and influenza B virus in upper or lower respiratory specimens. The assay provides a sensitive, nucleic-acid-based diagnostic tool for evaluation of specimens from patients in the acute phase of infection. Test kits are in production and will be shipped to public health laboratories once production, including quality control and assembly, has been completed.
- On July 5, CDC Issued a Health Alert Network \(HAN\) Health Advisory warning of Serious Adverse Health Events Associated with Methanol-based Hand Sanitizers following a series of adverse health events among patients who had ingested alcohol-based hand sanitizers or rubs (ABHSR) in June. Commercially available ABHSR usually contain either ethanol or isopropanol. However, some ABHSR that were manufactured in Mexico have been found to contain a significant amount of methanol. Repeated use of these products on the skin and ingestion may result in methanol poisoning.
